Searching Survivor: Volume II

By MARION BAUMANN-PARKHURST

GeniePress. Paperback. Book Condition: New. Heila Rowan (illustrator). Paperback. 296 pages. Dimensions: 8.0in. x 5.0in. x 0.8in. This, the second volume, has a temperament uniquely different from volume one. It leaves behind Germany and the Holocaust to take up the story in the United States where Marion became a citizen and found a satisfying career as a registered nurse. Her daughter Karen had grown up and Marion, by then divorced, remarried my father. After their marriage in 1980 they began a life together that would continue as a perpetual, exotic honeymoon. As dad tells it: Marion was enjoying her freedom and advancing her career. Everything was going her way then dad entered her life with the invitation: Marion Dear, let me take you away from all this. And so he did! As Marion's stepdaughter I have listened to her and my father converse about their experiences many times, perhaps before the fireplace at home or informally in casual conversation. My respect and admiration for Marion was reinforced many times over as I read her memoirs, chronicled here for all who will read her story. The intimate details in volume two are woven together with common sense and human sensitivity, and...
