Excerpt: .a survey of the room; and was not a little disappointed, as well as surprised, to find his audience so much diminished. I am persuaded Howard never has, in his own house, spoken so many words at one time, without interruption, since he was married. 1 endeavoured to soften his disappointment, by approving, and encouraging him to persevere in directing the conduct of his son. 1 cannot describe all that passed during three hours after breakfast, before the carriage was ordered. And, when it. was announced, no Horace was to be found. A counter order was given, and twa hours more elapsed before it came again to the door, You admire mjr patience; but I assure you 1 have no claim to that virtue in this instance, as 1 rather rejoiced at any delay that might prevent our arriving at Reading before five o...
