Mr. SMITH said: Mr. Speaker: It will be remembered that, a few days ago, I gave notice that I should introduce the following joint resolutions: Resolved, That the Secretary of State be required to furnish Louis Kossuth with copies of the acts of Congress defining treason and misdemeanors against the United States. Resolved, further. That if the said Louis Kossuth, after reading the said laws, shall still persist in making such speeches as he has made since his arrival in New York, inciting the young men of the country to take up arms against a nation with which the United States is at peace, it shall be the solemn duty of the President of the United States to have him arrested and detained until satisfactory assurances be given that he will cease his efforts to enlist the cooperative aid and armed interference of the people of these States in favor of Hungary. As soon as the resolutions were published, I was assailed in the fiercest manner by the Eastern press. The horde of cormorant, alien editors, who control the press, could scarcely find words low and mean enough, in their opinion, by which to characterize the resolutions, the author, and his motives. And hence it became important that I should vindicate my position. I was quietly, but anxiously, waiting for an opportunity to do this, without appearing to press for the attention of the House; and you may imagine my astonishment...
